Children in Crossfire

GIVING CHILDREN THE CHANCE TO CHOOSE

RICHARD MOORE

"CAN I GIVE HIM MY EYES?"
A STORY OF CHARITY AND FORGIVENESS

Richard Moore was born in Derry, Northern Ireland in 1961. At age 10 while walking home from school, he was struck in the face by a rubber bullet and left blind for life. Despite his blindness, Moore has always believed that he was more fortunate than most and dedicated his life to helping others, founding Children in Crossfire (www.childrenincrossfire.org). This outstanding charity works with local organizations abroad to deliver projects on the ground, protect the rights of vulnerable children and provide them access to clean water, food, health and education.

Richard Moore (center) with the Dalai Lama (left) and Charles Innis (right), the British soldier who tragically shot Moore as a boy. Moore has forgiven Innis, and the two are now unlikely friends. The Dalai Lama has publicly described Moore as his hero.

Come listen to Richard Moore as he shares his remarkable journey from tragedy to triumph and his charity's amazing work in areas of extreme poverty, focusing primarily in Tanzania and Ethiopia.
